Missouri is a Leader

Missouri is a recognized national leader through its Missouri Reentry Process.

In 2002, Missouri was the first state chosen by the National Institute of Corrections to adopt the Transition from Prison to Community Model.

Today, 14 states are involved in adopting the TPCI model. Missouri has provided technical assistance to at least 12 states with implementing reentry principles and practices.

MRP Principles

- Offenders can change and be productive citizens.
- MRP begins when an offender enters the Department of Corrections.
- MRP is a shared responsibility of offenders, their families, community agencies and the state.
- A seamless continuum of services should be in place for each offender leaving the institution to reduce future criminal behavior.
- Offenders should receive training, education and treatment to better prepare them for reentry to the community.
- Offenders who are better prepared to fulfill their obligations to their children can reduce the intergenerational cycle of crime.
- Employment that provides adequate income is critical to the offender's financial stability in the community.
- Stable housing is one key component, which impacts the stability of the offender in the community.
- Offenders should leave the institution as healthy as possible and have access to health care in the community.
- Victims must be allowed to participate in the MRP and be supported by it.

Missouri Reentry Process

Maximizing offender capacity to become productive citizens and enhance public safety.

Missouri Reentry Process

The Missouri Department of Corrections is responsible for over 100,000 persons – 31,000 in state correctional facilities and another 70,000 on probation or parole.

If all 101,000 resided in the same place – the Missouri Department of Corrections would be the state's fifth largest city. But those incarcerated come from every county and every corner of our state.

And when they are released – 97 percent will leave prison – and will return to our communities.

Returning can be difficult. There are challenges:

- Finding a job, housing or transportation
- Reestablishing family relationships
- Staying out of trouble

Offenders return to our communities – over 18,000 annually. These offenders have served their time, but what happens next?

Missouri communities can and need to help offenders rejoin the community and avoid returning to prison. It makes sense: less crime, productive adults, reunited families and lower costs to the taxpayers. Prison is expensive. The need is real. The reasons make sense. We know what it takes.

Our objective is clear: improve the overall transition process of offenders leaving prison and returning to Missouri communities.

Success in their effort requires everyone in the community.
