Missouri Department of Corrections

Mission Statement

The Missouri Department of Corrections supervises and provides rehabilitative services to adult offenders in correctional institutions and Missouri communities to enhance public safety.

Message from the Director:

The core value of public safety remains at the heart of what the Department strives for each and every day. Research shows that by preparing offenders to be productive members of society upon their release, the likelihood of recidivism decreases. Reentry is the catalyst for saving substantial amounts of money without sacrificing public safety. The Missouri Reentry Process (MRP) has made significant strides in achieving this goal since its inception nine years ago. The Department of Corrections and our state and local partners continue to keep public safety at the center of our efforts to reduce incarceration rates and recidivism, and to interrupt the cycle of intergenerational crime.

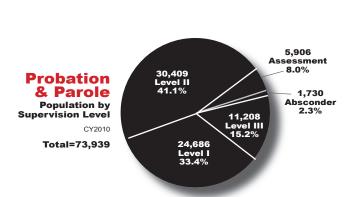

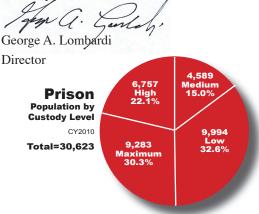

The importance of immediately starting the work of risk reduction and reentry when someone enters the system cannot be underestimated, and it is important that we remember that the first contact can be anywhere along the continuum of correctional intervention - with a probation officer or in a correctional institution. Ensuring that our staff has the skills and tools they need, that we are collaborating with our partners to define and reach shared goals, and that we are working in accord with the philosophy of evidence-based practice remain the cornerstones of our efforts.

Probation and Parole violator return and revocation rates continued to decline in 2010. In 2006, 26.2 percent of offenders on probation or parole returned to prison. In comparison, that percentage of offenders decreased to 19.9 percent in 2010. The improved rates are a testament to the MRP effort and the dedication of our Probation and Parole staff.

Sincerely,

As we look forward to the challenges and opportunities 2011 will bring, let us continue to strive toward our goals and meet adversity head on. The hard work and dedication of our department has shined in recent years as we continue to set the bar higher and higher with each passing year. I'm confident because of the resolve and commitment of our team, 2011 will be another banner year.

St. Louis Police Partnership:

On July 8, 2010, District EP hosted an award ceremony to recognize the combined efforts and key players of the St. Louis Police Partnership Program (SLPP). Based in part on the Boston Operation Night Light program, the SLPP began in 2007 in the Wells Goodfellow neighborhood and expanded in 2009 to include the Hamilton Heights neighborhood. At the time, Wells Goodfellow had the highest crime rates for the City of St. Louis. The department partnered with the St. Louis Metropolitan Police Department in an effort to curtail crime and improve the quality of these neighborhoods. Through the program, probation and parole officers are teamed with officers from the St. Louis City Metropolitan Police Department to supervise clients residing in the aforementioned neighborhoods. During the past year, the SLPP has experienced a success rate of 66 percent, and to repair the harm to the community, clients completed more than 500 hours of community service at the time of the ceremony. Director Lombardi presented a partnership award to Chief Daniel Isom of the St. Louis Metropolitan Police Department, the St. Louis Police Partnership Program and the Neighborhood Accountability Board members, a group of community volunteers whom clients must appear before once a month. Since this ceremony, Director Lombardi has also presented partnership awards to two companies - one in St. Louis and one in Kansas City - for their positive support of probationers and parolees.

Offender Finance Recognized:

On September 24, 2010, offender kiosks, an initiative of the department's Offender Finance Services, was among 173 government programs selected for the highly prestigious and newly-created Bright Ideas program through the Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. Kiosks are available inside the state's prisons where offenders can access their personal account information.

Puppies for Parole:

Puppies for Parole is the result of the department's partnerships with animal shelters and animal advocate groups throughout the state. On February 1, 2010, Jefferson City Correctional Center received the first dog through Puppies for Parole, and today there are 10 participating institutions with six more scheduled to implement the program in the coming year. The dogs' training consists of a two-month period in which they learn verbal commands and general obedience. The culmination of the training is the graduation ceremony at the end of the eight weeks, during which time the dogs are administered a K-9 Good Citizenship Test, which they must pass. Offender trainers gain vocational skills and learn responsibility through the program, plus it offers the opportunity to repay the community for the debts their crimes caused. In addition, it provides the dogs a second chance, if not their only chance, to find a home. The program also provides an incentive for offenders to modify their behavior, and has been found to provide a calming effect to the overall prison population and staff. Some of the dogs are being trained for service purposes. For example, a deaf dog was trained in sign language, and the offenders at the institution financed the adoption fee and presented the dog to the Missouri School for the Deaf in Fulton, Mo., to serve as a companion to the students. Dogs have also been trained to assist residents in group homes operated by the Department of Mental Health, and the department has partnered with Cardinal Glennon Hospital to train companion dogs for children with autism. The dogs in the program are also used in hospice units within the institutions and with offenders battling mental illness, and their presence has had a profound and therapeutic effect on their treatment.

Puppies for Parole is funded entirely through donations and does not receive state funding. In October 2010, the program received the Governor's Award for Quality and Productivity in the Innovation category.

MRP Grants:

In 2010, the department was awarded $457,935 in federal Second Chance Act funding through the U.S. Department of Justice for the Second Chance in Action (SCIA) project. The project will serve high risk women being released to rural southeastern Missouri communities. Women released to rural Missouri often face challenges in transition due to limited resources. The goal of SCIA is to increase public safety and reduce recidivism through an innovative transition model that draws upon research to intensify case management, improve employment outcomes and increase housing opportunities.

Aging Offender Management:

In 2010, the department developed an Aging Offender Management Team to determine the most appropriate process for dealing with the needs of aging offenders and reducing the need for long-term care in transitional care unit beds. Offenders over the age of 50 represented 15.3 percent of the incarcerated population, a percentage that has doubled in the past 10 years. The team's finding have led to several recommendations that are being implemented. Jefferson City Correctional Center piloted Enhance Care Units (ECUs), a middle ground between general population and the infirmary. The idea behind ECUs is to keep offenders as functional as possible while providing appropriate health and housing services to accommodate their special needs. In addition, the team also recommended the development of an Annual Appraisal Form to be used in conjunction with the annual physical completed by custody and/ or classification staff who have daily contact with the offender. This form will specifically target daily living activities such as going to meals, reporting to callouts, reporting to assignments, etc.

The Missouri Department of Corrections' staff exemplify professionalism every day in their mission to enhance public safety. The 12 employees pictured here - our 2010 employees of the month - went above and beyond in their job duties to advance the standard of excellence in corrections and to make Missouri safer. In addition to these shining examples of professionalism, the department saw several employees honored in 2010 for innovation, collaboration and bravery.

The department's Puppies for Parole program received the Governor's Award for Quality and Productivity in the category of Innovation on October 20, 2010. Sixteen employees, credited with developing the program, accepted the award during a ceremony in the Capitol rotunda.

In conjunction with State Employee Recognition Week, held in August, Governor Nixon announced the winners of the Awards of Distinction during a special ceremony in his Capitol office. Four out of five honorees were Department of Corrections' employees. Corrections Officer I John Taylor (Farmington Correctional Center) received the Heroism Award for his efforts to save a family from a house fire. Caseworker Paulette Bruch received the Human Relations Award for her work with reentry, specifically spearheading the Parenting from Prison pilot program, at Women's Eastern Reception, Diagnostic and Correctional Center in Vandalia. The Innovative Suggestion of the Year Award went to Caseworker Alan Butterworth (Farmington Correctional Center). He suggested establishing an automated savings account system to cover a released offender's transportation expenses, thereby reducing the cost to the department. Tim Wholf, district administrator with Probation and Parole (District 19), was honored with the Leadership Award for adjusting his staff's workload to ensure productivity and efficiency.

In 2010, the department had the honor of presenting an Award of Valor on four separate occasions to staff who acted in a heroic or courageous manner, despite personal risk. Those awards were presented to OSA-K Melissa Leuthauser (Missouri Eastern Correctional Center), Corrections Officer I John Taylor (Farmington Correctional Center), Probation Officer II Meghan Murbarger (District 17), and Classification Assistant Jerry Cartrette (Potosi Correctional Center).

The department's staff is more than 11,000 strong.

and these are but a few examples of our shining stars of public safety, integrity, and professionalism. We are truly proud of our staff!
